POETRY.

From the Philadelphia Saturday Courier.

HOW BEAUTIFUL IS LIFE!

How sweet, how sweet to live,
To breathe the freshened air—to greet the sun,
As he bounds onward joyously to give
Life to the fainting one;
Earth hails his coming through her wide domain—
With swelling music, or with silent strain.

'Tis sweet to live; for life
Itself is beautiful! The song of birds—
The murmur of the rill—the tempest's strife,
Have language—but its words
Wing their significance to him alone,
Who feels their living power, and feels to own.

How sweet to live! To trace
In each green tree—in cloud and star, and sun,
The radiant features of His smiling face,
Who "spoke and it was done,"
Who swung the planets in the trackless air,
And made the world so beautiful and fair.

Yes, it is sweet to feel
Life's quickened pulses in this heart of mine.
To walk in Nature's temple, and to kneel
And worship at her shrine—
To hear her spirit voices, as they tell
Of a far better land, where angels dwell.

The Spirit's voice is borne
Upon the zephyr's wing, and seems to give
New charms to life; it whispers, "Peace, and learn
How truly sweet to live!"
Life's purest, noblest pleasures have their birth,
In spreading joy's bright mantle o'er the earth.

Bind up the broken heart,
Call back the hopes that fondly linger here,
Flung from the memory the poisoned dart,
Bring forth on the pale cheek the rose's bloom
Brighter than lowly pathway to the tomb.

Go, spread salvation far
O'er the broad realm where darkness holds her sway,
And let the peaceful beam of Bethlehem's star
Turn darkness into day.
Live for a world with sin and sorrow life,
And thou shalt know how beautiful is life.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GOING ACCORDING TO LAW.

Not one hundred miles from the present sitting, there is a nice little village, just a day's ride from any where—though good fishing is much nearer at hand. These are its chief geographical advantages. It has a court house—some stores—not many; a blacksmith shop, a grocer's and a smart sprinkling of may-wends besides.

Now, if you were rambling about in the woods, and chanced to stumble upon such a place, you might say in your heart, that you had found nothing in particular, and ramble on further perhaps. But if you were not over hasty, and drop in about sun-down, you would find the snuggest and comfortablest kind of a tavern, with china trees before the piazza, and a glorious good fellow who rejoices in his heart at a joke, for its keeper.

From him we heard a few days since, while there, the following anecdote, which is given with every thing but his humorous manner. But we give that, render, your waistcoat strings would have a fair trial ere you got through with it.

There boarded with our honest Boniface, besides other single gentlemen of the village, the County Clerk, who is the bachelor of the town, for what town is without one? The qualifications, of filling these two important posts, as far as we know, are a good hand writing, a turn for staying at home, and genius for draughts. These fellows are generally graven men; sometimes otherwise, but for the most part, grave, staid men. Thomas was one of those. We might dwell, but we will forebore.

Well, one bright day, about like this, perhaps, Bob, our host, was sitting at the end of his shaded piazza, keeping his eye on things in general, and wondering in particular, whether the next one that came along would be a cow or a man in a round jacket, and perfectly raw for a joke.

At the fatherest end of the street, he saw one of those bald-faced, sorrel colts, with a long tail and thin hips, for which these colts are remarkable, bedstrided by a long-legged rider, in copperas pants and coat of the same; the colt shying and going sidewise at every thing, and the rider starting away right and left most instantly. After hitching sorrel to a swinging limb, away off, he came stalking up to the tavern, with an expression of face somewhere between a sneeze and a laugh.

"Mornin' sir said Copperas, cheerfully. The salutation was returned. "The Clerk ain't no where about here, as you know of is he?" Here was a customer for our good friend Bob.

"What did you say?" said Bob, to make him repeat. "The Clerk ain't no where about here?" Here I here!—no, poor fellow, not he. Couldn't hear you if you were to shoot a pistol in his ear. But he ain't at home just now. Gonna in and sit down. Got business, I suppose?"

"No! nothing much in particular," said Copperas, with a very mysterious air.

"Well," said Bob, by way of finding out his errand, "he won't be in for some time—may be I could do your business."

And thereupon Copperas fell wriggling and screwing about, looking very uneasy. At last he started up suddenly, and putting his face close to the tavern keeper's said in a half whisper—

"I've come on this marrying business," and then laughed a good deal at it, for he was very cheerful fellow.

"Who is to be married?" enquired Bob, in a whisper.

"Uncle Ben and Tilda Strong."

"License, eh? Oh! ah! well—that's different. The Clerk will have to grant that—I'll step over and see if he's come and away he ran."

"Thomas," said he, as he spied that worthy at his writing table, "there's a chap at my house who wants a license, but I can't make him understand anything I say to him."

"Why what's the matter?" asked Thomas.

"So deaf—a mill stone is only a circumstance to him. But I'll bring him over—it is not worth while for me to tell him anything," and he hurried off.

On the way to the office, Bob, in spirit of confidence, informed Mr. Copperas, that the Clerk was a crank, cross grained old fellow, but he mustn't mind his talking; it is just his way.

Copperas had hardly entered the door before he bawled out—

"I'm come after a license for uncle Ben Stone and Tilda Strong."

"Wall," said Thomas in the same tone, "you needn't hollow out so." Then turning to Bob in his usual tone, that's just the way with deaf people; they think every body is as deaf as themselves.

Bob then nodded to Copperas, to intimate that he didn't hear, and he screamed still louder.

"I say Mr. I want to get a license."

"Do you think I'm deaf as a post? You'd better make a public out' cry of it at the court house door, young man," said Thomas somewhat irritated.

Here Bob interposed and taking Copperas outside the door, explained to him that he must make a public out' cry before he could get the license. This was dreadful. Here was Copperas with the strictest injunction of secrecy from his uncle Ben, and now to have to let it out before the people of the town it was too bad. In all this Bob sympathized deeply.

But trying as it was he thought it best to go according to law.

"But," said Copperas deplorably, "I can't tell about it, and uncle Ben don't want me to either."

"Can't cry," said the host, put upon a new track,—why, God bless you, its a matter of nothing, when nobody is there to object. But when there is objection, I grant it ain't altogether so pleasant. There was Joe Stokes used— you know'd Joe—to live on Beaver dam. Fine young man too. When he was married, the kin objected, and when he went to make his out cry, it was about this time of day, and he had to cry till breakfast before he could worry them out."

"And did he worry 'em out at last?"

"Worry them out! I reckon he did, and told them to bring in any friends they had, and he would out cry the whole kit and billin' of 'em, and if that didn't satisfy them they should feel the point of his knuckles beside. But in your case, you have to hollow out a good deal, what you are after, and afterwards cry some; a little will do."

ingly darne'd, he would never vote for a dead man again.

THE TEXAN HERO.

The Cincinnati Mercury tells the following amusing story of which a facetious comedian named Jim Wills, who played in the city some years ago, was the hero. He was says the mercury, a queer compound of human nature—a man who could with ease make others laugh but seldom ever laughed himself—a melancholy man through life, which caused him to 'shut off his mortal coil,' ere half his race was run.

About the time the Texan excitement ran so high in the United States Jim Wills, was in Pittsburg, in that situation so common to play actors, viz: "flat broke. Standing one day on the wharf, with his serious visage expanded, planning how he should get down the river without money, he heard a drum and a fife. On looking round he saw a company of reckless looking half-uniformed soldiers embarking for New Orleans bearing a Texan banner. A thought struck him. Next day he sent his trunks on board the first boat to start, and just as the Captain was tapping the bell for the last time, Wills stepped on board and dragged his trunks into an unoccupied state room, and took from his theatrical wardrobe, a soldier coat with a buff breast and three rows of buttons, a chapeau with an immense plume, a red sash a pair of military trowsers, a grizzly black wig, with a pair of false whiskers. By the time the boat had got fairly under way, Jim was fully equipped with his stage sword gracefully hanging by his side. Drawing his white kid gloves, he hesitated a moment, but relying on his peculiar powers, he opened the door and with a military stoop, walked into the cabin which was filled with passengers. In a moment all eyes were directed towards him, but he walked up to the bar and drank a glass of brandy and water. In the mean time all was bustle and confusion to find out who the officer was. A general rush was made for the register, but he had not yet put down his name—the Captain was consulted but knew nothing. At length however, feeling a little curiosity himself, he walked up to Jim and bowing politely said, "Sir."

"Sir to you," said Wills, touching his chapeau a la militaire.

"Will you do me the favor to register your name so that I can provide a state room for you?"

"Oh with pleasure," said Jim, and walking up to the register he flourished in a round text, "C. P. Edwards, Major, Texas army."

The crowd pressed round the table—they read the name—universal enthusiasm prevailed and three tremendous cheers were given for Texas and Liberty.

Jim took off his chapeau, acknowledged the compliment with a graceful bow, and a few patriotic remarks.

It is almost needless to say, that from that moment the so distant Major was a lion. Every one sought to make his acquaintance—the ladies opened the cabin door to get a peep at him—he was placed at the head of the table—and at night he was made as drunk as Bacchus on champagne.

Next day he was promenading the hurricane deck, linked arm and arm with the Captain, and a warm hearted southerner, who resided in Vicksburg.

"Major," said the southerner, "I know very well that you have been on a mission to collect arms, ammunition and recruits—but on that subject you must of course be mum, in consequence of the treaty between Mexico and the United States. For my part, I could see every colored rascal hang like a dog upon a tree."

"Whatever my business may have been, I find that I have exhausted all my means in the cause; in fact I believe I shall not be able to pay my passage until I arrive at New Orleans."

"Don't mention it," said the Captain, "I am sure, I could not think of taking anything from you."

"I have it," said the southerner, "come with me."

The trio adjourned to the clerk's office, where a striking appeal for aid to Texas was written. The southern gentleman carried it among the passengers and collected $150 which was handed over to Wills. At night a grand supper was given to which speeches were made and toasts drank. The cabin was decorated with the star spangled banner, entwined with the flag of the lone star, manufactured by some of the ladies out of some of their red and white 'old no, we never mentions 'em, for the occasion."

About 12 o'clock, the company commenced singing songs, and at length the Major was called upon to favor the company with a song. He complied by "favoring the company" with his famous song of Billy Barlow.

"Bravo!" said one.

"Excellent!" another.

"Capital!" a third.

"I could do enough site better," said Jim, who was fast verging into the fourth state of intoxication, "If I had the proper togs on."

After giving three faint hazzas for Texas, the party broke up. Next morning the clerk went to Wills' state

Glorious Democratic Meeting.

The Democracy of Paris and vicinity had a glorious meeting at the Court House on the evening of the 12th inst. to respond to the nominations of the Baltimore Convention.

Polk & Dallas are the two magnetic wires which are to lead Democratic electricity to all points of the Union.

Communication from Mr. Everett.

A letter from Mr. Everett, the American Minister at London, to Mr. Calhoun, Secretary of State, has been received, and was laid before the Senate on the 7th inst.

He states that some conversation of a Parliamentary character had taken place between Lord Brougham and the British Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Lord Aberdeen.

The following paragraph from the National Intelligencer will illustrate the manner which prevailed here on Wednesday of an angry correspondence.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

It is said that John Tyler will withdraw his name as a candidate for the Presidency in a few days.

TEMPERANCE CELEBRATION ON THE FOURTH. A Committee of Arrangements have invited all the Temperance Societies and friends of the cause every where to meet at Portland and take part in the Temperance celebration on the fourth of July.

A grand Temperance procession is to be formed near Exchange street, in which Temperance Societies, Military and League Companies will be assigned their appropriate places.

Hon. Samuel C. Allen—one of the Massachusetts commissioners to settle the north-eastern boundary, writing from St. Johns river, May 19, to a friend in Portland, Me., says—

We found snow as we came up the river; it is now quite cold. The people are planting their potatoes; they have no more corn. You can hardly conceive the quantity of timber that is drifted down the St. Johns.

WHALING EXTRAORDINARY.

An exciting scene took place in the harbor of Portland on Monday afternoon, says the Advertiser, no less than the capture of a right whale, yielding 40 barrels of oil.

A conscientious news boy. The Boston Mail relates an incident that happened in the counting-room of that paper, a few days since, which is worthy of illustration.

CLAY'S CHANCES.

"OUT OF THEIR MOUTH"

We beg leave to refer our neighbor of the Advertiser to his favorite authority, Horace Greeley, of the New York Tribune, for certain facts of interest in the calculation of chances.

Mr. Greeley copies from his note book some of these reports, which are given below.

Maine delegation report that their State may vote for Harrison or Scott. One delegate thought it might for Clay.

New Hampshire—best chance for Harrison; Scott second; not much hope for any.

Massachusetts—Can we carry our state for Harrison? Yes, 11, Nays 9. Answer, Yes—for Scott, yes 11, Nays 3. Answer, Yes. For Clay? 11 Nays 7.

Rhode Island—Certain for Clay; hope it will be carried with either.

Connecticut—Certain for Clay.

Vermont—Certain, with Scott or Harrison. For Clay, yes 2—don't build 3.

New York—Certain for Scott; probable for Harrison; doubtful for Clay.

Ohio—For Harrison? Yes certainly, by thousands. For Clay? NO. For Scott? Yes 1—Nays 10.

Indiana—Substantially ditto.

Virginia—The chairman of the committee from this State was BENJAMIN WATKINS LEWIS, a world known as the spirit of truth and honor.

Whole number of votes 294. CERTAIN FOR CLAY, 53; certain for Harrison, 123; certain for Scott, 101.

Now, if Mr. Clay could not be elected in 1840, what has occurred to increase his prospects? We ask the Portland Advertiser to tell us.

HARD TIMES.

All trades, professions, callings and avocations, one time or another loudly complain of the dullness of trade.

The fishmonger is obliged to give his mud notice to seek another place, while the muscles of his physiology are weakly relaxed that severely a soul (soul) is now seen in his countenance.

The tailor talks, too, of taking other measures, and finds that the art of cutting, which he professes, is un- happily only useful to him when he "spies a dun or a cutter."

MICHIGAN IN THE FIELD.

A very large and enthusiastic meeting was held in Detroit, soon after the reception of the doings of the Baltimore Convention reached that place, and the nomination of POLK and DALLAS was most heartily responded to.

The Detroit Free Press gives a glowing account of the meeting—General Cass was present and addressed the assembly in an eloquent speech, in which he expressed his hearty concurrence in the nomination of the National Convention, and declared his determination to support it faithfully.

THE EMPIRE STATE.

We can only allude to the progress of ratification as it sweeps over the great State of New York. Large and enthusiastic meetings, have been held in Albany, Plattsburg, Poughkeepsie, Union Vale, Newburgh, Mount Pleasant, Rochester, Watertown, Penn Yan, and other places, salutes were fired in many towns, and the nominations of POLK and DALLAS have been received with unanimity and enthusiasm heretofore unparalleled.

TEXAS TREATY REJECTED.

The Treaty for the annexation of Texas to the Union, was rejected by the U. S. Senate on the 11th inst, by a vote of 17 to 28.

The following are the yeas and nays upon the question the democrats voting against it being marked in Italics:

YEAS.—Atchison, Bagby, Breese, Buchanan, Colquitt, Fulton, Haywood, Henderson, Hagar, Lewis, McDuffie, Semple, Sevier, Sturgeon, Walker, Woodbury—16.

NAYS.—Allen, Archer, Atherton, Barrow, Bayard, Benton, Berrien, Clayton, Critchfield, Dayton, Evans, Fairchild, Foster, Francis, Huntington, Jarnagin, Johnson, Mangum, Merrick, Miller, Morehead, Niles, Pearce, Phelps, Porter, Rives, Simmons, Tallmadge, Tappan, Upham, White, Woodbridge, Wright—40.

As soon as the vote upon the treaty was announced, and the injunction of the secrecy removed, Mr. Benton gave notice that on Monday he would introduce a bill to annex Texas to the Union.

Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills.

The virtues of these Pills are now cheerfully and universally acknowledged by their great popularity and extensive circulation, and few who peruse this article will be found unacquainted with some proofs of their real efficacy.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS are designed to ASSIST NATURE in restoring the various organs to a healthy action, by CLEANSING the Stomach and bowels, and PURIFYING the whole System from those morbid and corrupt humors which are the cause of disease, and thus gives to the patient health, sickness, and cheerfulness for dependency.

It is a singular fact, which has attracted the use of these Pills in introducing new and improved medicines to the market, and which they endeavor to palm on the unsuspecting as the GENUINE MEDICINE, hence the importance of purchasing only of the regular advertised Agents.

THE PLUMBER is all in the dumps, and gives it as his opinion that all trade is at an end; at least he is led to conclude so.

MARRIED.

In this town, yesterday, by E. C. Shaw, Esq. Capt. Elliot S. Hinton, of the City of New York, to Miss Sarah Adams, daughter of the late Amos Allen, of South Berwick.

ON THE HILL! ON THE HILL!

Horse Shoeing & Farriering.

THE subscriber would inform the inhabitants of Paris and the adjoining towns, that he has taken the Shop on Paris Hill recently occupied by John Cooper, where he holds himself in readiness to do all work entrusted to his care with neatness and dispatch.

He is thoroughly acquainted with Horse-Shoeing and Farriering, having had eight years experience in the business he flatters himself that he can efficiently cure horses of Overreaching, Foul quarters, Locking, &c. &c. Strict attention will be paid to Ironing of Carriages, Ox-Shoeing, and other business usually done in country Shops.

Done at short notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN N. CLIFFORD.

June 17, 1844.

CAUTION.

THE subscriber having contracted with the town of Waterford for the support of the Poor of said town from April 13, 1844 to April 30, 1845, hereby forbids all persons harboring or trusting them on his account, as suitable provision having made for their support, he will pay no debts of their contracting after this date.

Waterford, June 13, 1844.

NOTICE OF FORTHCOMING.

WHEREAS James Young of Byron in the County of Oxford, on the 27th day of March, A. D. 1843, conveyed to one Thos. A. Griffin of said County, by his mortgage deed of that date, a certain Lot of land in said Byron being Lot number 4, and in the Fourteenth Range of lots in said town, containing by estimation one hundred and more acres, and as the condition of said mortgage has been broken I give this public notice to foreclose the same.
